The right of young people to be listened

Let me follow my dreams

There is a problem with the people's mentality:

„The old people/parents are always right“.

And that's a mistake!

Most of the parents, don't listen to their children, considering themselves like being smarter because of their age and life experience.

That leads to an increasing of level of stress for their children, because they feel that someone is trying to stop them to experience, discover or to make their dreams come true.

- The law should give to the young people, the chance to be listened by specialised employers of national authority, who can decide to punish the parents who don't care of their children's opinion.
- The youngster's rights agency should be available for all young people who live in the country.
- The agency should listen, give advices and help youngsters with every problem they have.
- The National Agency should inform all the people about the law and their activity.
